The International Fire Service Accreditation Congress (IFSAC)

The International Fire Services Accreditation Congress (IFSAC) was established in 1990 in the United States of America. It is one of the concerned authorities concerned with licensing fire and rescue services training centers around the world. It is also with auditing those centers and their conformity with international "NFPA" standards for the quality of fire and rescue training.

The Saudi Academy of Civil Aviation represented in the Fire and Rescue Training Center provides the possibility to obtain certificates of the International Congress for Accreditation of Fire Services (IFSAC) by providing internationally accredited tests for fire and rescue workers after obtaining the Congress accreditation in 2019.
